2019 PSI Conference
QEII Centre, London

The 2019 PSI Conference app has launched!

We are pleased to announce the launch of the PSI Conference App, kindly sponsored by AstraZeneca.

As per previous years, the app contains all the information you need to know about the conference including the full programme, speakers, abstracts, exhibitors and much more. There is also a map of the nearby area and further information on the social events during the conference.

Don't forget that you can also submit your questions for the Regulatory & HTA Townhall session via the app - just click on the Ask a Regulatory Question under the information tab. Last year there was a great level of interaction within the app, so we hope to increase on this year on year.

Search 'PSI Conference 2019' in the App Store or Google Play, or click below to download the PSI app to your device. Within the PSI Conference app you will then be able to create a short profile to engage with other attendees, and view the full content available.

Attending the PSI conference gives me the opportunity to learn, first hand, about state of the art statistical thinking in drug development that I can apply directly to my job. In addition, the variety of social events that happen throughout the conference provide a great chance to meet and network with colleagues in the industry.

SPOTLIGHT ON: Impact & Influence Program: Increasing Essential Skills for Statisticians Workshop

At this year's conference there will be a workshop focusing on Impact & Influence Program: Increasing Essential Skills for Statisticians. The session will start off with a motivating presentation to set the scene and give some examples of putting ideas in to practice.

The presentations will be followed by a series of interactive parts where you will get to participate.

The session last year was really well received and we expect these sessions to be popular. Due to the interactive nature, we will have a maximum of 50 delegates able to participate in each session, so please arrive early to avoid disappointment.
